

GARRISON'S FACT FAILS TO DISTURB ROSEY LEADERS

Chiefs of Both Parties Think Resignation Will Have No Political Effect

REPUBLICANS CONFIDENT

The resignation of Secretary of War Lindley M. Garrison will have little or no effect on the 1916 presidential campaign as far as New Jersey, Garrison's native State, is concerned, according to Democratic and Republican leaders here.

It is unanimously asserted by men prominent in both parties that Secretary Garrison has no following in New Jersey strong enough to cause a split in the vote of the Democratic party last year.

AS DEVLIN SEES IT. The attitude of the Democratic leaders is perhaps best illustrated by Prosecutor Martin P. Devlin, of Trenton, one of the most influential party organizers of the State, who summarizes the situation as follows:

"I do not believe that the Democratic party in this State will be harmed in any way by Secretary Garrison's resignation because the reasons given for his action are not of a character to bring any detrimental criticism on the Administration."

"President Wilson's re-election will depend solely upon the view the people of this country take toward his economic policies and his methods of dealing with the foreign nations."

"The appointment of a Democrat from this State would only be of great value if there were a man who had a successful political record in his command, but there is no such man in New Jersey at present."

KATZENBACH'S VIEW. Frank S. Katzenbach, one-time candidate for Governor in 1912, also a power in the Democratic party, asserts that Secretary Garrison's action was such a surprise that there has as yet been no time to consider the results will be.

W. T. READ'S OPINION. The attitude of Republican leaders of New Jersey is perhaps best expressed by Senator William T. Read, who has recently been elected State Treasurer.

INCREASED FEES PLANNED TO AID CITY'S REVENUE

Heads of Departments and Finance Committee Chief to Confer

OFFSET TO DIRECT TAXES. Definite steps to increase the city's annual revenue through an increase in fee charges in city and county departments and a readjustment of the bases of other incidental and miscellaneous sources of income will be taken shortly at a series of conferences between Joseph P. Gaffney, chairman of Councils' Finance Committee, and the heads of the departments in City Hall.

Mr. Gaffney said today that he had explained his plans to City Controller Walton and that the necessary arrangements would be made with the department heads. The amount of $1,000,000, it is hoped, will be added to the annual income of Philadelphia through the proposed changes.

PLAN OF READJUSTMENT. After a thorough investigation of all possible means of increasing the city's income from sources other than direct taxes, Mr. Gaffney will recommend action by Councils. A general increase in the approximate amount which may be the city nearly $500,000 annually, will be the first change proposed by the finance chairman. A special councilmanic committee has been appointed to investigate the equity of existing rates and the charges for water rates.

MAYOR STUDIES PROBLEM. Mayor Smith said today in discussing the city's financial problem with City Controller and myself are making an exhaustive study of the financial problems of the city, and I am certain that all the problems will be solved.
